Numismatists' Professional Opinion

from the Numismatic Professionals at the Academy of Coins[©]

5/16/2019

Sam Rupe:

Thank you for submitting your coin to PriceThatCoin.com.

We examined your photographs. In our professional opinion, the coin pictured is:

#1. An authentic 1889-CC Morgan Dollar.

#2. This appears to be a problem coin. Your photographs (rated 8 / 10, 10 perfect, 1 poor) are sufficient for determining grade and authenticity. Better photographs would help in narrowing the value range.

#3. Current Market Value (5/16/2019)

This coin has a value of between $1,500 - $2,500. This is a wide value range because it depends entirely on the competing inventory at time of auction. From the photographs, it's difficult to ascertain the possibility that the coin could be aided to get into a full-grade 45 or 50 holder, perhaps from a different certification service, with some conservation. This may not be possible at all. Furthermore, this looks like a scarce variety, which may enhance the value as is. If re-certified as said variety, it should help the coin's value at auction.
